

Wednesday, 16 July 2003 (cont'd)

'Stories We Tell' exhibit opens at the National Gallery

Sixty-two local photographers and writers participated in the exhibit, which was the brainchild of National Gallery Director Leslie Bigelman. Each photographer took five photos, that were handed over to the writers, who wrote stories based on the images.

During the opening the photographers and writers met for the first time to discuss their work. Many of the participants stated that they enjoyed being involved in the exhibit and praised one another for their interpretations. Writer Natalie Coleman added, "I had a lot of fun writing the story and I thought the

Photographer Terry Thompson discusses his work with writer Lennon Christian photos that Siobhan Timms took were exquisite." Beach Club employee Christian Barnard was also pleasantly surprised that his co-worker Sonita Malan was the photographer for his piece entitled Serendipitous Self.