

Arreckly: Towards a Cultural Identity

1 February – 26 March 2007

A group of artists resident in the Cayman Islands are invited to submit work for an exhibition that addresses the issue of cultural identity 'arreckly' - right now.

Each artist displays or expresses an individual identity through their work, but will they collectively share an identity which goes beyond the use of a common language or passport?

This collection of work not only pushes each artist to a new level of self-discovery but also begins to piece together a national cultural identity.
